SHICK TEST IS USED ON CHILDREN IN MANY CITIES

Test Shows Children Who Are Susceptible to Diphtheria and Is One of the Greatest Late Discoveries.

(By DR. V. D. GUPTTARD.)

In reading special articles in newspapers and magazines relating to prevention of diseases, the Shick test is frequently mentioned. In many cities this test is made on all school children. It is made to determine just which children are susceptible to diphtheria.

A drop of very dilute diphtheria toxin, especially prepared for the purpose, is injected just under the skin with a hypodermic needle. If there is no antitoxin in the blood, a small red spot will appear over the site of the injection. This indicates that the child is not immune and will readily take the disease if exposed to a case or to a carrier of diphtheria germs.

If all children showing this positive reaction are given an injection under the skin of the standard mixture of toxin and antitoxin, they will become immune for years. The injections are given a week apart just as in the prevention of typhoid fever and three injections are given just as in the latter case.

Means then are at hand to banish diphtheria entirely from any community. This is being done in many eastern cities, and is a practical, safe and reliable method to be practiced everywhere.

This test stands out as one of the greatest triumphs of preventive medicine and one of the most important scientific discoveries of all time.

In the Mason County Court Monday Frank Wood was appointed Deputy Constable in the Second Magisterial district upon motion of Constable Ben P. Fleming.

POPE BENEDICT DIED EARLY SUNDAY AFTER A HARD BATTLE

Head of Roman Catholic Church Succumbs to Pneumonia After Battling Hard for Days.

POPE BENEDICT, XV.

Rome, Jan. 23.—Pope Benedict's death occurred at 6 o'clock Sunday morning.

The end had been expected for several hours. The attending physicians, Cardinal Gasparri and other members of the Pope's household were present at the bedside.

Shortly before midnight all hope was abandoned, and at 2 o'clock Dr. Battistini announced that the Pope could not live longer than four hours at the maximum.

There had been moments during Saturday when it was feared the end had come, but stimulants revived the pontiff, and his natural powers of resistance carried him through the turning point temporarily. The holy father seemed to cling to life, as did Pope Pius X in 1914, when the final outcome was in doubt for many hours.

The Sacred Congregation convened Sunday morning when the cardinals were informed of the Pope's death. With the exception of Cardinal Gasparri, the Papal Secretary of State they gathered in Benedict's private apartments. Gasparri in due and solemn form, escorted by the Swiss Guard in full dress and accompanied by the prelates and acolytes of the Roverend Apostolic chamber entered the apartments a few minutes later. He is administering the Holy See during the interregnum. With him also was Monsignor Sincero, Secretary of the Sacred College.

Cardinal Gasparri, surrounded by the cardinals, then proceeded to verify the death of Benedict, extending over the lifeless form a silver wand and crying out "Giacomo! Giacomo!" He opened the certificate of death and declaimed: "Dominus Papam, Noster Mortuus est," thus announcing officially the Pope's death.

On leaving the Pontifical chambers, Cardinal Gasparri, still escorted by the Swiss Guard, descended to the first floor, where the Sacred Congregation convened, commencing its deliberations at 10 o'clock. The official and semi-official Vatican organs give 6 o'clock as the time of the Pope's death, and the Rome newspapers do likewise.

BUSINESS LULL TO END BY MARCH, KNOX ASSERTS.

"The salesmen of the United States hold the prosperity of the country in the palm of their hands, and they must not only make an effort to get the business of the country to a normal basis, but above a normal basis," James S. Knox, President of the Knox School of Manship, of Cleveland, said at a lecture in the auditorium of the Littleford School in Cincinnati.

"Business has been improving during the past few months and by March 1, 1922, the depression now existing in business will disappear," he said. "The export business of the country should be increased, and wide-awake business executives who are now making an effort to sell the goods they manufacture to foreign countries will bring the export business to a higher level."

FUNDS FOR CINCINNATI TERMINAL BEING RAISED

Mason County Land Owner Heads Committee and Makes First Contribution To Fund.

Cincinnati, Jan. 21.—Thousands of tin plate, steel billets, pig iron, nails and similar cargo will be available for shipment by river to Cincinnati at large saving to shippers if the proposed river terminal at Harriet street is installed. This statement was made yesterday by Captain Oscar F. Barrett, Chairman of the Special Rail-Water Terminal Committee, at a meeting of that committee, held at the Chamber of Commerce, when the construction was decided upon by private enterprise.

Captain Barrett held that the $25,000 necessary to construct the crane platform would be readily subscribed by users of the facility. He started the subscription list with $2,000, stating that the saving on a single cargo would indemnify the investors as (1) the transgression of law, emphasizing the fact that all slugs are placed in the same category; (2) all unrighteousness; (3) conformity to the world; (4) whatsoever is not of faith. Dr. Harmon lamented the failure of the world today to love God and holy things, while too much emphasis is being placed on the satisfying of material needs and physical pleasure. He was outspoken in his condemnation of passive church membership which tolerates standards of life and conduct that are a frightful menace to the young life in every community. He described sin as being universal and seductive, and no respecter of rank or person. Its wages are proven by the Bible to be death to sobriety, virtue, manhood, liberty, conscience, the spirit, and ultimately to the soul.

The plan is to have a 50-foot platform, on which switch tracks of truck lines can be placed so that the truck of the crane will make it possible to unload tonnage direct from the water carrier to gondola, flat car or truck. This facility will save the shipper upward of $1.50 a ton in handling and delivery charge, it is claimed.

M. POINCAIRE AT THE HELM.

As the dust of the French cabinet crash begins to settle, we observe M. Poincare embarking upon one of the oldest games of ministerial government. It has frequently been noted that no sooner does the party of the opposition accede to power than those tremendous differences in policy about which the ex-opposition party had been making such a frightful row begin in an astonishing fashion to coalesce into the general background of "practical considerations." It is suddenly found necessary to continue, "as a matter of expediency," those policies which, before the ministerial change were about to plunge the nation into misery and ruin. It is always a delicate operation to harmonize the things which the party has now to do, in order to carry on the government, with the things which it said ought to be done when it was not under that cramping necessity.

M. Poincare is at present attending to the operation, with the result that there is as yet some confusion as to the exact trend of his policy. The chicken has not yet been hatched, and it is difficult to decide how much of the news cabled across is chicken and how much is merely the fragments of the old opposition shell still clinging to it. It seems certain that, as a practical matter, Poincare will be obliged to begin by following very closely in Briand's footsteps—this will probably carry France to Genoa and it may be that M. Poincare will find, after the French delegation has gone to Genoa, that it will have to work there very much as it would have under Briand. So far the two essential points in which M. Poincare has made plain his difference with his predecessor are the question of ambassadorial rather than ministerial representation in the European councils, and an extension of the British guarantee treaty which would not only defend the homeland of France but which would also give France a free hand in her activities throughout the rest of Europe, both in enforcing reparations sanctions and in building the elaborate card houses which she is always trying to construct out of the various fragmentary nationalities of central and eastern Europe.

So far, it might be said, so good. Neither of these demands will lead directly to an overthrow of everything which the Cannes conference set out to accomplish for Europe, although either one might do so. It all depends upon how M. Poincare treats the future, when he is farther away from his speeches in opposition than he is now. But the point about the fact that these should be the first policies emerging from the new ministry is the point that neither of them represents any immediate practical advantage. They are both directed, not toward securing France a greater amount of reparations, say, but toward securing her a greater amount of prestige. France is playing for the moral, not the material supremacy, at the moment. The question which must be open in the minds of most observers is the question of whether the kind of moral supremacy for which she is playing is precisely the kind which would do her the most good in the end.—Baltimore News.

IF HE FAILED, WHAT

He is a Japanese renter on an excellent farm in one of Oregon's best agricultural counties. He lives on salmon and eats it with a stick. He and his wife, as all Japanese do, work early and late, practice frugality in all things and seize upon every chance by which to get along in the world.

They failed to make a profit this year. The other day the husband entered his landlord's office in Portland and said he would have to give up the farm and try to make a living in some other way. It was a conclusion that the kindly owner of the farm had already reached, and, on hearing the tenant's statement, he at once sliced off a portion of the annual rent.

And here is the moral of the story: If on their low standard of living and their known skill and energy in farm life, this Japanese couple cannot make things go, how about American farmers?

And if the profits of agriculture continue to decline and American farmers continue to move to town, as the will, and if, in consequence, Japanese and Slave and aliens from Southeastern Europe take the place of the American farmer, how much goods will the merchants then sell to the agricultural population, and who will constitute the domestic market for American manufactured output?—Oregon Journal.

"I want," said the very plain girl, "a book entitled, 'Cultivate Your Natural Beauty'." "Here it is," said the clerk, who wanted to be sociable. "Are you getting it for a friend?" And the very plain girl put her purse back into her bag and went right out.

New York Letter by Lucy Jeannie Price

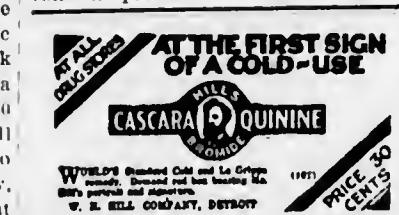

New York. — City Comptroller Craig thinks the city should have an advertising department. He fears that New York has had a great deal of adverse publicity. That may be quite true, but somehow I have always felt from our oldsters' attitude that our adverse publicity, emphasizing all our wickedness, has a lure for the rest of the world fully as strong as all the sweet pretty things that could be said about us.

A memorial to the dog heroes of the war has been erected at the Canine Cemetery at Hartsdale, one of our most attractive suburbs. It is a Belgian police dog in bronze, his head turned towards the roadway as he looks down from the top of a rustic granite block. He wears a knapsack and on the ground at his feet are a bronze helmet and canteen. The $2,500 which it cost was contributed in small amounts varying from 50 cents to $100. The Hartsdale Canine Cemetery, by the way, is the only permanent burial ground for pets in the country. It was established in 1896 and it shelters many a strange little tomb. There is the sarcophagus of "Goldfleck, the beautiful lion," and tiny graves of canines. Dogs, however, greatly predominate among the sleepers there.

NELSON BUILDING

MAYSVILLE, KY.

There seems to be a touch of romance, almost medieval in color, in the effort of the Austrian Government to obtain a loan here in New York with the Gobelin tapestry collection as collateral. Doesn't that sound like the days of — well, of Christopher Columbus, at least? The Gobelin collection which the Austrian government proposes to send here comprises 200 to 300 tapestries, the ancient work of bankers in Florence, Spain and France. But the practical-minded New York bankers have so far, according to their statement, declined to lend money in exchange for housing these treasures.

—NY—

We have been tremendously interested in the two little Eskimo girls whom Capt. Roald Amundson brought here from the Arctic Circle and who have been spending several days here on their way to Norway, where they are to be educated. They are already devoted to shops and movies, so you see how powerful is the force of adaptation.

PRACTICING WHAT WE PREACH. By IRVING S. CORB

Most of us are ready to preach thrift for others. Not enough of us are willing to practice it on our own account. Probably the man who first suggested that the rest of the world should put by something for a rainy day didn't own an umbrella himself.

Many people look on thrift as something upon a boil on another man's neck. We tell him comfortingly that a boil on his neck is a good thing for him—it'll purify his blood, clear his system of poisons, make his general health better. Later on we assure him he'll feel ever so much happier for having undergone the present experience. But for all that none of us would care to have that boil transferred from the other man's neck to our neck.

In a way of speaking the same thing applies to the practice of a rational thrift. Too often the average American follows the line of least resistance in this matter. When times are good he thinks he has not need to save. And when times are bad he has nothing to save anyhow. Our spirit of national optimism is such that across the fair part of a fat year we fail to discern the creeping shadows of lean years coming after. The Arkansas mountaineer who explained that he didn't mend the hole in his coat because in stormy weather he couldn't mend it and in fair weather he had no need to mend it because it then didn't leak, was typical of a whole lot of us.

The United States Government in carrying on its Thrift Campaign is striving to combat this common tendency amongst our people. The government, through the Treasury Department, is trying to show us that Such Proof as This Should Convince Any Maysville Citizen.

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can he had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow-citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so.

Telling one's experience when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Maysville adds one more to the many acts of Home Endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

D. S. Stout, 22 East Second street, Maysville, says: "Just after my recovery from a pneumonia, my kidneys began to give me trouble. My back had a steady dull ache and it hurt me to breathe. My eyes would get puffy underneath. I knew my kidneys were in bad shape and something would have to be done to check the disorder so I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and began using them. It didn't take long to rid me of my trouble. I take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills."

SENTENCE AFFIRMED.

Frankfort, Jan. 21. — Although the incorrect use of "and" in the indictment charging Owen Walker of Madison county, with having in his possession liquors for sale, invalidated the indictment, yet the Court of Appeals says that no objection was made to the indictment during the trial, and therefore the rights of the defendant were not prejudiced. The judgment of the lower court finding Walker is affirmed.

In a way of speaking the same thing applies to the practice of a rational thrift. Too often the average American follows the line of least resistance in this matter. When times are good he thinks he has not need to save. And when times are bad he has nothing to save anyhow. Our spirit of national optimism is such that across the fair part of a fat year we fail to discern the creeping shadows of lean years coming after. The Arkansas mountaineer who explained that he didn't mend the hole in his coat because in stormy weather he couldn't mend it and in fair weather he had no need to mend it because it then didn't leak, was typical of a whole lot of us.

The United States Government in carrying on its Thrift Campaign is striving to combat this common tendency amongst our people. The government, through the Treasury Department, is trying to show us that it is to be done to check the disorder so I

Half Sick, Cross Husbands Will Be Helped by Gude's Pepto-Mangan.

Is he "cross as a bear" when he comes home? Is he nervous and a bit pale and always tired? You can help him back to health with Gude's Pepto-Mangan. He is run-down, and Pepto-Mangan, the wonderful blood tonic with the right kind of iron in it, will build him up. Help your husband get plenty of red blood and he will be well and good-natured again and stronger, too. Good blood, good health, makes happy good humor—that is the way it goes. If you don't give him some kind of a tonic he will probably get worse—they usually do. Go to the drug store and ask for Gude's Pepto-Mangan in liquid or tablet form. It is pleasant to take and works wonders if taken daily for a few weeks.—Advertised.
